VITA AMICAE

by Ursula K. Le Guin

When you were rain you fell when you were cup you held when you were whole you broke loud, loud you spoke when you were bell

When you were way you led homeward until the end when you were life you died live, live, you cried
  when you were dead