SCENE

Thebes, before the royal palace.
Antigone and Ismene emerge from its great central door.

Antigone

1 My sister, my Ismene, do you know of any suffering from our father sprung that Zeus does not achieve for us survivors?
There's nothing grievous, nothing free from doom, not shameful, not dishonored, I've not seen.
Your sufferings and mine.
And now, what of this edict which they say the commander has proclaimed to the whole people?
Have you heard anything? Or don't you know that the foes' trouble comes upon our friends?
Antigone

Ismene
I've heard no word, Antigone, of our friends. Not sweet nor bitter, since that single moment when we two lost two brothers who died on one day by a double blow. And since the Argive army went away this very night, I have no further news of fortune or disaster for myself.

Antigone
I knew it well, and brought you from the house for just this reason, that you alone may hear.

Ismene
What is it? Clearly some news has clouded you.

Antigone
It has indeed. Creon will give the one of our two brothers honor in the tomb; the other none. Eteocles, with just entreatment treated, as law provides he has hidden under earth to have full honor with the dead below. But Polynices' corpse who died in pain, they say he has proclaimed to the whole town that none may bury him and none bewail, but leave him unwep, untombed, a rich sweet sight for the hungry birds' beholding. Such orders they say the worthy Creon gives to you and me—yes, yes, I say to me—and that he's coming to proclaim it clear to those who know it not. Further: he has the matter so at heart that anyone who dares attempt the act will die by public stoning in the town. So there you have it and you soon will show if you are noble, or fallen from your descent.

Ismene
If things have reached this stage, what can I do, poor sister, that will help to make or mend?
Antigone
Think will you share my labor and my act.

Ismene
What will you risk? And where is your intent?

Antigone
Will you take up that corpse along with me?

Ismene
To bury him you mean, when it’s forbidden?

Antigone
My brother, and yours, though you may wish he were not.
I never shall be found to be his traitor.

Ismene
O hard of mind! When Creon spoke against it!

Antigone
It’s not for him to keep me from my own.

Ismene
Alas. Remember, sister, how our father perished abhorred, ill-famed.
Himself with his own hand, through his own curse destroyed both eyes.
Remember next his mother and his wife finishing life in the shame of the twisted strings.
And third two brothers on a single day, poor creatures, murdering, a common doom
each with his arm accomplished on the other.
And now look at the two of us alone.
We’ll perish terribly if we force law and try to cross the royal vote and power.
We must remember that we two are women
so not to fight with men.
And that since we are subject to strong power
we must hear these orders, or any that may be worse.
So I shall ask of them beneath the earth forgiveness, for in these things I am forced, and shall obey the men in power. I know that wild and futile action makes no sense.
Antigone

I wouldn't urge it. And if now you wished to act, you wouldn't please me as a partner. Be what you want to; but that man shall I bury. For me, the doer, death is best. Friend shall I lie with him, yes friend with friend, when I have dared the crime of piety. Longer the time in which to please the dead than that for those up here. There shall I lie forever. You may see fit to keep from honor what the gods have honored.

Ismene

I shall do no dishonor. But to act against the citizens. I cannot.

Antigone

That's your protection. Now I go, to pile the burial-mound for him, my dearest brother.

Ismene

Oh my poor sister. How I fear for you!

Antigone

For me, don't borrow trouble. Clear your fate.

Ismene

At least give no one warning of this act; you keep it hidden, and I'll do the same.

Antigone

Dear God! Denounce me. I shall hate you more if silent, not proclaiming this to all.

Ismene

You have a hot mind over chilly things.

Antigone

I know I please those whom I most should please.

Ismene

If but you can. You crave what can't be done.
Antigone
And so, when strength runs out, I shall give over.

Ismene
Wrong from the start, to chase what cannot be.

Antigone
If that's your saying, I shall hate you first,
and next the dead will hate you in all justice.
But let me and my own ill-counseling suffer this terror. I shall suffer nothing as great as dying with a lack of grace.

Ismene
Go, since you want to. But know this: you go senseless indeed, but loved by those who love you.

(Ismene returns to the palace; Antigone leaves by one of the side entrances.
The Chorus now enters from the other side.)

Chorus
Sun's own radiance, fairest light ever shone on the gates of Thebes, than did you shine, O golden day's eye, coming over Dirce's stream, on the Man who had come from Argos with all his armor running now in headlong fear as you shook his bridle free.

He was stirred by the dubious quarrel of Polyneices.
So, screaming shrill, like an eagle over the land he flew,
covered with white-snow wing,
with many weapons,
with horse-hair crested helms.

He who had stood above our halls, gaping about our seven gates, with that circle of thirsting spears.
Gone, without our blood in his jaws,
before the torch took hold on our tower-crown.
Rattle of war at his back; hard the fight for the dragon's foe.
The boasts of a proud tongue are for Zeus to hate.
So seeing them streaming on in insolent clangor of gold, he struck with hurling fire him who rushed for the high wall's top, to cry conquest abroad.

Swinging, striking the earth he fell fire in hand, who in mad attack, had raged against us with blasts of hate.
He failed. He failed of his aim.
For the rest great Ares dealt his blows about,
first in the war-team.

The captains stationed at seven gates fought with seven and left behind their brazen arms as an offering to Zeus who is turner of battle.
All but those wretches, sons of one man,
one mother's sons, who sent their spears each against each and found the share of a common death together.

Great-named Victory comes to us answering Thebe's warrior-joy.
Let us forget the wars just done and visit the shrines of the gods.
All, with night-long dance which Bacchus will lead, who shakes Thebe's acres.

(Creon enters from the palace)

Now here he comes, the king of the land, Creon, Menoeceus' son, newly named by the gods' new fate.
What plan that beats about his mind has made him call this council-session, sending his summons to all?

Creon
My friends, the very gods who shook the state with mighty surge have set it straight again.
So now I sent for you, chosen from all,
first that I knew you constant in respect to Laius' royal power; and again when Oedipus had set the state to rights, and when he perished, you were faithful still in mind to the descendants of the dead.
When they two perished by a double fate,
on one day struck and striking and defiled each by his own hand, now it comes that I hold all the power and the royal throne through close connection with the perished men.
You cannot learn of any man the soul,
the mind, and the intent until he shows his practise of the government and law.
For I believe that who controls the state and does not hold to the best plans of all,
but locks his tongue up through some kind of fear, that he is worst of all who are or were.
And he who counts another greater friend than his own fatherland, I put him nowhere.
So I—may Zeus all-seeing always know it—could not keep silent as disaster crept upon the town, destroying hope of safety.
Nor could I count the enemy of the land friend to myself, not I who know so well that she it is who saves us, sailing straight, and only so can we have friends at all.

With such good rules shall I enlarge our state.
And now I have proclaimed their brother-edict.
In the matter of the sons of Oedipus, citizens, know: Eteocles who died, defending this our town with champion spear, is to be covered in the grave and granted
all holy rites we give the noble dead.
But his brother Polynices whom I name the exile who came back and sought to burn his fatherland, the gods who were his kin, who tried to gorge on blood he shared, and lead the rest of us as slaves—
it is announced that no one in this town may give him burial or mourn for him.
Leave him unburied, leave his corpse disgraced,
a dinner for the birds and for the dogs.
Such is my mind. Never shall I, myself, honor the wicked and reject the just.
Antigone

The man who is well-minded to the state from me in death and life shall have his honor.

Chorus
This resolution, Creon, is your own, in the matter of the traitor and the true.
For you can make such rulings as you will about the living and about the dead.

Creon
Now you be sentinels of the decree.

Chorus
Order some younger man to take this on.

Creon
Already there are watchers of the corpse.

Chorus
What other order would you give us, then?

Creon
Not to take sides with any who disobey.

Chorus
No fool is fool as far as loving death.

Creon
Death is the price. But often we have known men to be ruined by the hope of profit.

Guard
Lord, I can't claim that I am out of breath from rushing here with light and hasty step, for I had many haltings in my thought making me double back upon my road.
My mind kept saying many things to me:
"Why go where you will surely pay the price?"
"Fool, are you halting? And if Creon learns from someone else, how shall you not be hurt?"
Turning this over, on I dilly-dallied.
And so a short trip turns itself to long.
Finally, though, my coming here won out.
If what I say is nothing, still I'll say it.
For I come clutching to one single hope that I can't suffer what is not my fate.

Creon
What is it that brings on this gloom of yours?

Guard
I want to tell you first about myself.
I didn't do it, didn't see who did it.
It isn't right for me to get in trouble.

Creon
Your aim is good. You fence the fact around.
It's clear you have some shocking news to tell.

Guard
Terrible tidings make for long delays.

Creon
Speak out the story, and then get away.

Guard
I'll tell you. Someone left the corpse just now, burial all accomplished, thirsty dust strewn on the flesh, the ritual complete.

Creon
What are you saying? What man has dared to do it?

Guard
I wouldn't know. There were no marks of picks, no grubbed-out earth. The ground was dry and hard,
no trace of wheels. The doer left no sign.
When the first fellow on the day-shift showed us,
we all were sick with wonder.
For he was hidden, not inside a tomb, light dust upon him, enough to turn the curse,
no wild beast's track, nor track of any hound
Antigone

having been near, nor was the body torn.
We roared bad words about, guard against guard, and came to blows. No one was there to stop us.
Each man had done it, nobody had done it so as to prove it on him—we couldn’t tell.
We were prepared to hold to red-hot iron,
to walk through fire, to swear before the gods
we hadn’t done it, hadn’t shared the plan, when it was plotted or when it was done.
And last, when all our sleuthing came out nowhere, one fellow spoke, who made our heads to droop low toward the ground. We couldn’t disagree.
We couldn’t see a chance of getting off.
He said we had to tell you all about it.
We couldn’t hide the fact.
So he won out. The lot chose poor old me to win the prize. So here I am unwilling, quite sure you people hardly want to see me.
Nobody likes the bringer of bad news.

Chorus

Lord, while he spoke, my mind kept on debating.
Isn’t this action possibly a god’s?

Creon

Stop now, before you fill me up with rage, or you’ll prove yourself insane as well as old.
Unbearable, your saying that the gods take any kindly forethought for this corpse.
Would it be they had hidden him away, honoring his good service, his who came to burn their pillared temples and their wealth, even their land, and break apart their laws?
Or have you seen them honor wicked men?
It isn’t so.
No, from the first there were some men in town who took the edict hard, and growled against me, who hid the fact that they were rearing back,
not rightly in the yoke, no way my friends.
These are the people—oh it’s clear to me—
who have bribed these men and brought about the deed.
No current custom among men as bad as silver currency. This destroys the state; this drives men from their homes; this wicked teacher drives solid citizens to acts of shame. It shows men how to practise infamy and know the deeds of all unholiness. Every least hireling who helped in this brought about then the sentence he shall have. But further, as I still revere great Zeus, understand this, I tell you under oath, if you don’t find the very man whose hands buried the corpse, bring him for me to see, not death alone shall be enough for you till living, hanging, you make clear the crime. For any future grabbings you’ll have learned where to get pay, and that it doesn’t pay to squeeze a profit out of every source. For you’ll have felt that more men come to doom through dirty profits than are kept by them.

Guard
May I say something? Or just turn and go?

Creon
Aren’t you aware your speech is most unwelcome?

Guard
Does it annoy your hearing or your mind?

Creon
Why are you out to allocate my pain?

Guard
The doer hurts your mind. I hurt your ears.

Creon
You are a quibbling rascal through and through.

Guard
But anyhow I never did the deed.

Creon
And you the man who sold your mind for money!
Antigone

Guard
Oh!
How terrible to guess, and guess at lies!

Creon
Go pretty up your guesswork. If you don’t show me the doers you will have to say that wicked payments work their own revenge.

Guard
Indeed, I pray he’s found, but yes or no, taken or not as luck may settle it,
you won’t see me returning to this place.
Saved when I neither hoped nor thought to be,
I owe the gods a mighty debt of thanks.

(Creon enters the palace. The Guard leaves by the way he came.)

Chorus
Many the wonders but nothing walks stranger than man.
This thing crosses the sea in the winter’s storm, making his path through the roaring waves.
And she, the greatest of gods, the earth—
ageless she is, and unwearied—he wears her away as the ploughs go up and down from year to year and his mules turn up the soil.

Gay nations of birds he snares and leads,
wild beast tribes and the salty brood of the sea,
with the twisted mesh of his nets, this clever man.
He controls with craft the beasts of the open air, walkers on hills. The horse with his shaggy mane
he holds and harnesses, yoked about the neck, and the strong bull of the mountain.

Language, and thought like the wind and the feelings that make the town, his has taught himself, and shelter against the cold, refuge from rain. He can always help himself.
He faces no future helpless. There’s only death that he cannot find an escape from. He has contrived refuge from illnesses once beyond all cure.
Clever beyond all dreams the inventive craft that he has which may drive him one time or another to well or ill.
When he honors the laws of the land and the gods' sworn right high indeed is his city; but stateless the man who dares to dwell with dishonor. Not by my fire, ever to share my thoughts, who does these things.

(The Guard enters with Antigone.)

My mind is split at this awful sight.
I know her. I cannot deny Antigone is here.
Alas, the unhappy girl,
hers unhappy father's child.
Oh what is the meaning of this?
It cannot be you that they bring for breaking the royal law, captured in open shame.

Guard
This is the woman who has done the deed.
We caught her at the burying. Where's the king?

(Creon enters.)

Chorus
Back from the house again just when he's needed.

Creon
What must I measure up to? What has happened?

Guard
Lord, one should never swear off anything.
Afterthought makes the first resolve a liar.
I could have vowed I wouldn't come back here after your threats, after the storm I faced.
But joy that comes beyond the wildest hope is bigger than all other pleasure known.
I'm here, though I swore not to be, and bring this girl. We caught her burying the dead.
This time we didn't need to shake the lots;
mine was the luck, all mine.
So now, lord, take her, you, and question her and prove her as you will. But I am free.
And I deserve full clearance on this charge.

Creon

Explain the circumstance of the arrest.

Guard

She was burying the man. You have it all.

Creon

Is this the truth? And do you grasp its meaning?

Guard

I saw her burying the very corpse you had forbidden. Is this adequate?

Creon

How was she caught and taken in the act?

Guard

It was like this: when we got back again struck with those dreadful threatenings of yours, we swept away the dust that hid the corpse.
We stripped it back to slimy nakedness.
And then we sat to windward on the hill
so as to dodge the smell.
We poked each other up with growling threats
if anyone was careless of his work.
For some time this went on, till it was noon.
The sun was high and hot. Then from the earth up rose a dusty whirlwind to the sky, filling the plain, smearing the forest-leaves, clogging the upper air. We shut our eyes, sat and endured the plague the gods had sent.
So the storm left us after a long time.
We saw the girl. She cried the sharp and shrill cry of a bitter bird which sees the nest bare where the young birds lay.
So this same girl, seeing the body stripped, cried with great groanings, cried a dreadful curse upon the people who had done the deed.
Soon in her hands she brought the thirsty dust, and holding high a pitcher of wrought bronze she poured the three libations for the dead.
We saw this and surged down. We trapped her fast;
and she was calm. We taxed her with the deeds both past and present. Nothing was denied.
And I was glad, and yet I took it hard.
One’s own escape from trouble makes one glad;
but bringing friends to trouble is hard grief.
Still, I care less for all these second thoughts than for the fact that I myself am safe.

Creon
You there, whose head is drooping to the ground,
do you admit this, or deny you did it?

Antigone
I say I did it and I don’t deny it.

Creon (to the guard)
Take yourself off wherever you wish to go free of a heavy charge.

Creon (to Antigone)
You—tell me not at length but in a word.
You knew the order not to do this thing?

Antigone
I knew, of course I knew. The word was plain.

Creon
And still you dared to overstep these laws?

Antigone
For me it was not Zeus who made that order.
Nor did that Justice who lives with the gods below
mark out such laws to hold among mankind.
Nor did I think your orders were so strong that you, a mortal man, could over-run the gods’ unwritten and unfailing laws.
Not now, nor yesterday’s, they always live,
and no one knows their origin in time.
So not through fear of any man's proud spirit would I be likely to neglect these laws, draw on myself the gods' sure punishment.

I knew that I must die; how could I not?
even without your warning. If I die before my time, I say it is a gain.
Who lives in sorrows many as are mine
how shall he not be glad to gain his death?
And so, for me to meet this fate, no grief.

But if I left that corpse, my mother's son, dead and unburied I'd have cause to grieve
as now I grieve not.
And if you think my acts are foolishness
the foolishness may be in a fool's eye.

Chorus
The girl is bitter. She's her father's child.
She cannot yield to trouble; nor could he.

Creon
These rigid spirits are the first to fall.
The strongest iron, hardened in the fire,
most often ends in scraps and shatterings.

Small curbs bring raging horses back to terms.
Slave to his neighbor, who can think of pride?
This girl was expert in her insolence
when she broke bounds beyond established law.
Once she had done it, insolence the second,
to boast her doing, and to laugh in it.

I am no man and she the man instead if she can have this conquest without pain.
She is my sister's child, but were she child of closer kin than any at my hearth, she and her sister should not so escape their death and doom. I charge Ismene too.
She shared the planning of this burial.
Call her outside. I saw her in the house, maddened, no longer mistress of herself.
The sly intent betrays itself sometimes before the secret plotters work their wrong.
I hate it too when someone caught in crime then wants to make it seem a lovely thing.

_Antigone_
   Do you want more than my arrest and death?

_Creon_
   No more than that. For that is all I need.

_Antigone_
   Why are you waiting? Nothing that you say fits with my thought. I pray it never will.
   Nor will you ever like to hear my words.
   And yet what greater glory could I find than giving my own brother funeral?
   All these would say that they approved my act did fear not mute them.
   (A king is fortunate in many ways, and most, that he can act and speak at will.)

_Creon_
   None of these others see the case this way.

_Antigone_
   They see, and do not say. You have them cowed.

_Creon_
   And you are not ashamed to think alone?

_Antigone_
   No, I am not ashamed. When was it shame to serve the children of my mother’s womb?

_Creon_
   It was not your brother who died against him, then?

_Antigone_
   Full brother, on both sides, my parents’ child.

_Creon_
   Your act of grace, in his regard, is crime.
Antigone

1  Antigone
   The corpse below would never say it was.

Creon

5  When you honor him and the criminal just alike?

Antigone

10 It was a brother, not a slave, who died.

Creon

Died to destroy this land the other guarded.

Antigone

Death yearns for equal law for all the dead.

Creon

Not that the good and bad draw equal shares.

Antigone

20 Who knows that this is holiness below?

Creon

Never the enemy, even in death, a friend.

Antigone

25 I cannot share in hatred, but in love.

Creon

Then go down there, if you must love, and love the dead. No woman rules me while I live.

(Ismene is brought from the palace under guard.)

Chorus

55 Look there! Ismene is coming out.
She loves her sister and mourns, with clouded brow and bloodied cheeks,
tears on her lovely face.

Creon

40 You, lurking like a viper in the house, who sucked me dry. I looked the other way while twin destruction planned against the throne.
Now tell me, do you say you shared this deed?
Or will you swear you didn’t even know?

Ismene
I did the deed, if she agrees I did.
I am accessory and share the blame.

Antigone
Justice will not allow this. You did not wish for a part, nor did I give you one.

Ismene
You are in trouble, and I’m not ashamed to sail beside you into suffering.

Antigone
Death and the dead, they know whose act it was.
I cannot love a friend whose love is words.

Ismene
Sister, I pray, don’t fence me out from honor, from death with you, and honor done the dead.

Antigone
Don’t die along with me, nor make your own that which you did not do. My death’s enough.

Ismene
When you are gone what life can be my friend?

Antigone
Love Creon. He’s your kinsman and your care.

Ismene
Why hurt me, when it does yourself no good?

Antigone
I also suffer, when I laugh at you.

Ismene
What further service can I do you now?
Antigone

To save yourself. I shall not envy you.

Ismene

Alas for me. Am I outside your fate?

Antigone

Yes. For you chose to live when I chose death.

Ismene

At least I was not silent. You were warned.

Antigone

Some will have thought you wiser. Some will not.

Ismene

And yet the blame is equal for us both.

Antigone

Take heart. You live. My life died long ago. And that has made me fit to help the dead.

Creon

One of these girls has shown her lack of sense just now. The other had it from her birth.

Ismene

Yes, lord. When people fall in deep distress their native sense departs, and will not stay.

Creon

You chose your mind’s distraction when you chose to work out wickedness with this wicked girl.

Ismene

What life is there for me to live without her?

Creon

Don’t speak of her. For she is here no more.

Ismene

But will you kill your own son’s promised bride?
Creon
Oh, there are other furrows for his plough.

Ismene
But where the closeness that has bound these two?

Creon
Not for my sons will I choose wicked wives.

Ismene
Dear Haemon, your father robs you of your rights.

Creon
You and your marriage trouble me too much.

Ismene
You will take away his bride from your own son?

Creon
Yes. Death will help me break this marriage off.

Chorus
It seems determined that the girl must die.

Creon
You helped determine it. Now, no delay!
Slaves, take them in. They must be women now.
No more free running.
Even the bold will fly when they see Death drawing in close enough to end their life.
(Antigone and Ismene are taken inside.)

Chorus
Fortunate they whose lives have no taste of pain.
For those whose house is shaken by the gods escape no kind of doom. It extends to all the kin like the wave that comes when the winds of Thrace run over the dark of the sea.
The black sand of the bottom is brought from the depth;
the beaten capes sound back with a hollow cry.
Ancient the sorrow of Labdacus' house, I know.
Dead men's grief comes back, and falls on grief.
No generation can free the next.
One of the gods will strike. There is no escape.
So now the light goes out for the house of Oedipus, while the bloody knife cuts the remaining root. Folly and Fury have done this.

What madness of man, O Zeus, can bind your power?
Not sleep can destroy it who ages all, nor the weariless months the gods have set. Unaged in time monarch you rule of Olympus' gleaming light.
Near time, far future, and the past,
one law controls them all:
any greatness in human life brings doom.

Wandering hope brings help to many men.
But others she tricks from their giddy loves,
and her quarry knows nothing until he has walked into flame.
Word of wisdom it was when someone said,
"The bad becomes the good to him a god would doom."
Only briefly is that one from under doom.

(Haemon enters from the side.)

Here is your one surviving son.
Does he come in grief at the fate of his bride,
in pain that he's tricked of his wedding?

Creon
Soon we shall know more than a seer could tell us.
Son, have you heard the vote condemned your bride?
And are you here, maddened against your father, or are we friends, whatever I may do?

Haemon
My father, I am yours. You keep me straight with your good judgment, which I shall ever follow.
Nor shall a marriage count for more with me than your kind leading.
Creon

There's my good boy. So should you hold at heart and stand behind your father all the way.
It is for this men pray they may beget households of dutiful obedient sons, who share alike in punishing enemies,
and give due honor to their father's friends.
Whoever breeds a child that will not help what has he sown but trouble for himself, and for his enemies laughter full and free?
Son, do not let your lust mislead your mind, all for a woman's sake, for well you know how cold the thing he takes into his arms who has a wicked woman for his wife.
What deeper wounding than a friend no friend?
Oh spit her forth forever, as your foe.
Let the girl marry somebody in Hades.
Since I have caught her in the open act, the only one in town who disobeyed,
I shall not now proclaim myself a liar, but kill her. Let her sing her song of Zeus who guards the kindred.
If I allow disorder in my house I'd surely have to licence it abroad.
A man who deals in fairness with his own, he can make manifest justice in the state. But he who crosses law, or forces it, or hopes to bring the rulers under him, shall never have a word of praise from me.
The man the state has put in place must have obedient hearing to his least command when it is right, and even when it's not. He who accepts this teaching I can trust, ruler, or ruled, to function in his place, to stand his ground even in the storm of spears, a mate to trust in battle at one's side.
There is no greater wrong than disobedience. This ruins cities, this tears down our homes, this breaks the battle-front in panic-rout.
If men live decently it is because discipline saves their very lives for them. So I must guard the men who yield to order, not let myself be beaten by a woman.
Antigone

Better, if it must happen, that a man should overset me.
I won't be called weaker than womankind.

Chorus
We think—unless our age is cheating us—that what you say is sensible and right.

Haemon
Father, the gods have given men good sense, the only sure possession that we have.
that there was error in your late remarks.
Yet someone else might bring some further light.
Because I am your son I must keep watch on all men's doing where it touches you, their speech, and most of all, their discontents.
Your presence frightens any common man from saying things you would not care to hear.
But in dark corners I have heard them say how the whole town is grieving for this girl, unjustly doomed, if ever woman was,
to die in shame for glorious action done.
She would not leave her fallen, slaughtered brother there, as he lay, unburied, for the birds and hungry dogs to make an end of him.
Isn't her real desert a golden prize?
This is the undercover speech in town.
Father, your welfare is my greatest good.
What loveliness in life for any child outweighs a father's fortune and good fame?
And so a father feels his children's faring.
Then, do not have one mind, and one alone that only your opinion can be right.
Whoever thinks that he alone is wise,
his eloquence, his mind, above the rest,
come the unfolding, shows his emptiness.
A man, though wise, should never be ashamed of learning more, and must unbend his mind.
Have you not seen the trees beside the torrent,
the ones that bend them saving every leaf,
while the resistant perish root and branch?
   And so the ship that will not slacken sail,
   the sheet drawn tight, unyielding, overturns.
   She ends the voyage with her keel on top.
No, yield your wrath, allow a change of stand.
   Young as I am, if I may give advice,
   I'd say it would be best if men were born perfect in wisdom, but that failing this (which often fails) it can be no dishonor to learn from others when they speak good sense.

Chorus
   Lord, if your son has spoken to the point you should take his lesson. He should do the same.
   Both sides have spoken well.

Creon
   At my age I'm to school my mind by his?
   This boy instructor is my master, then?

Haemon
   I urge no wrong. I'm young, but you should watch my actions, not my years, to judge of me.

Creon
   A loyal action, to respect disorder?

Haemon
   I wouldn't urge respect for wickedness.

Creon
   You don't think she is sick with that disease?

Haemon
   Your fellow-citizens maintain she's not.

Creon
   Is the town to tell me how I ought to rule?

Haemon
   Now there you speak just like a boy yourself.
Creon
Am I to rule by other mind than mine?

Haemon
No city is property of a single man.

Creon
But custom gives possession to the ruler.

Haemon
You’d rule a desert beautifully alone.

Creon (to the Chorus)
It seems he’s firmly on the woman’s side.

Haemon
If you’re a woman. It is you I care for.

Creon
Wicked, to try conclusions with your father.

Haemon
When you conclude unjustly, so I must.

Creon
Am I unjust, when I respect my office?

Haemon
You tread down the gods’ due. Respect is gone.

Creon
Your mind is poisoned. Weaker than a woman!

Haemon
At least you’ll never see me yield to shame.

Creon
Your whole long argument is but for her.

Haemon
And you, and me, and for the gods below.
Creon
You shall not marry her while she's alive.

Haemon
Then she shall die. Her death will bring another.

Creon
Your boldness has made progress. Threats, indeed!

Haemon
No threat, to speak against your empty plan.

Creon
Past due, sharp lessons for your empty brain.

Haemon
If you weren't father, I should call you mad.

Creon
Don't flatter me with "father," you woman's slave.

Haemon
You wish to speak but never wish to hear.

Creon
You think so? By Olympus, you shall not revile me with these tauntings and go free. Bring out the hateful creature; she shall die full in his sight, close at her bridegroom's side.

Haemon
Not at my side her death, and you will not ever lay eyes upon my face again. Find other friends to rave with after this.

(Haemon leaves, by one of the side entrances.)

Chorus
Lord, he has gone with all the speed of rage. When such a man is grieved his mind is hard.
Creon
Oh, let him go, plan superhuman action.
In any case the girls shall not escape.

Chorus
You plan for both the punishment of death?

Creon
Not her who did not do it. You are right.

Chorus
And what death have you chosen for the other?

Creon
To take her where the foot of man comes not.
There shall I hide her in a hollowed cave living, and leave her just so much to eat as clears the city from the guilt of death.
There, if she prays to Death, the only god of her respect, she may manage not to die.
Or she may learn at last and even then how much too much her labor for the dead.

(Creon returns to the palace.)

Chorus
Love unconquered in fight, love who falls on our havings.
You rest in the bloom of a girl’s unwithered face.
You cross the sea, you are known in the wildest lairs.
Not the immortal gods can fly, nor men of a day. Who has you within him is mad.
You twist the minds of the just. Wrong they pursue and are ruined.
You made this quarrel of kindred before us now.
Desire looks clear from the eyes of a lovely bride:
power as strong as the founded world.
For there is the goddess at play with whom no man can fight.

(Antigone is brought from the palace under guard.)

Now I am carried beyond all bounds.
My tears will not be checked.
I see Antigone depart to the chamber where all men sleep.
Antigone

Men of my fathers' land, you see me go my last journey. My last sight of the sun, then never again. Death who brings all to sleep takes me alive to the shore of the river underground.
Not for me was the marriage-hymn, nor will anyone start the song at a wedding of mine. Acheron is my mate.

Chorus

With praise as your portion you go in fame to the vault of the dead.
Untouched by wasting disease, not paying the price of the sword,
of your own motion you go.
Alone among mortals will you descend in life to the house of Death.

Antigone

Pitiful was the death that stranger died, our queen once, Tantalus' daughter. The rock it covered her over, like stubborn ivy it grew.
Still, as she wastes, the rain and snow companion her.
Pouring down from her mourning eyes comes the water that soaks the stone.
My own putting to sleep a god has planned like hers.

Chorus

God's child and god she was.
We are born to death.
Yet even in death you will have your fame,
to have gone like a god to your fate,
in living and dying alike.

Antigone

Laughter against me now. In the name of our fathers' gods, could you not wait till I went? Must affront be thrown in my face?
O city of wealthy men.
I call upon Dirce's spring,
I call upon Thebe's grove in the armored plain,
Antigone

to be my witness, how with no friend's mourning, by what decree I go to the fresh-made prison-tomb.
Alive to the place of corpses, an alien still,
ever at home with the living nor with the dead.

Chorus
You went to the furthest verge of daring, but there you found the high foundation of justice, and fell.
Perhaps you are paying your father's pain.

Antigone
You speak of my darkest thought, my pitiful father's fame, spread through all the world, and the doom that haunts our house,
the royal house of Thebes.
My mother's marriage-bed.
Destruction where she lay with her husband-son,
my father. These are my parents and I their child.
I go to stay with them. My curse is to die unwed.
My brother, you found your fate when you found your bride, found it for me as well. Dead, you destroy my life.

Chorus
You showed respect for the dead.
So we for you: but power is not to be thwarted so.
Your self-sufficiency has brought you down.

Antigone
Unwept, no wedding-song, unfriended, now I go the road laid down for me.
No longer shall I see this holy light of the sun.
No friend to bewail my fate.

(Creon enters from the palace.)

Creon
When people sing the dirge for their own deaths ahead of time, nothing will break them off if they can hope that this will buy delay.
Take her away at once, and open up the tomb I spoke of. Leave her there alone.
There let her choose: death, or a buried life.
No stain of guilt upon us in this case,
but she is exiled from our life on earth.

_Antigone_

O tomb, O marriage-chamber, hollowed out house that will watch forever, where I go.
To my own people, who are mostly there;
Persephone has taken them to her.
Last of them all, ill-fated past the rest,
shall I descend, before my course is run.
Still when I get there I may hope to find
I come as a dear friend to my dear father, to you, my mother, and my brother too.
All three of you have known my hand in death.
I washed your bodies, dressed them for the grave, poured out the last libation at the tomb.
Last, Polyneices knows the price I pay for doing final service to his corpse.
And yet the wise will know my choice was right.
Had I had children or their father dead,
I'd let them moulder. I should not have chosen in such a case to cross the state's decree.
What is the law that lies behind these words?
One husband gone, I might have found another, or a child from a new man in first child's place,
but with my parents hid away in death,
no brother, ever, could spring up for me.
Such was the law by which I honored you.
But Creon thought the doing was a crime,
a dreadful daring, brother of my heart.
So now he takes and leads me out by force.
No marriage-bed, no marriage-song for me,
and since no wedding, so no child to rear.
I go, without a friend, struck down by fate,
live to the hollow chambers of the dead.
What divine justice have I disobeyed?
Why, in my misery, look to the gods for help?
Can I call any of them my ally?
I stand convicted of impiety,
the evidence my pious duty done.
Antigone

Should the gods think that this is righteousness, in suffering I'll see my error clear.
But if it is the others who are wrong I wish them no greater punishment than mine.

Chorus

The same tempest of mind as ever, controls the girl.

Creon

Therefore her guards shall regret the slowness with which they move.

Antigone

That word comes close to death.

Creon

You are perfectly right in that.

Antigone

O town of my fathers in Thebe's land, O gods of our house.
I am led away at last.
Look, leaders of Thebes,
I am last of your royal line.
Look what I suffer, at whose command, because I respected the right.

(Antigone is led away. The slow procession should begin during the preceding passage.)

Chorus

Danae suffered too.
She went from the light to the brass-built room, chamber and tomb together. Like you, poor child, she was of great descent, and more, she held and kept the seed of the golden rain which was Zeus.
Fate has terrible power.
You cannot escape it by wealth or war.
No fort will keep it out, no ships outrun it.
Remember the angry king, son of Dryas, who raged at the god and paid, pent in a rock-walled prison. His bursting wrath slowly went down. As the terror of madness went, he learned of his frenzied attack on the god.
Fool, he had tried to stop the dancing women possessed of god, the fire of Dionysus, the songs and flutes.

Where the dark rocks divide sea from sea in Thrace is Salmydessus whose savage god beheld the terrible blinding wounds dealt to Phineus' sons by their father's wife.
Dark the eyes that looked to avenge their mother.
Sharp with her shuttle she struck, and blooded her hands.

Wasting they wept their fate, settled when they were born to Cleopatra, unhappy queen.
She was a princess too, of an ancient house, reared in the cave of the wild north wind, her father.
Half a goddess but, child, she suffered like you.

(Enter, from the side Teiresias, the blind prophet, led by a boy attendant.)

Teiresias
Elders of Thebes, we two have come one road, two of us looking through one pair of eyes.
This is the way of walking for the blind.

Creon
Teiresias, what news has brought you here?

Teiresias
I'll tell you. You in turn must trust the prophet.

Creon
I've always been attentive to your counsel.

Teiresias
And therefore you have steered this city straight.
Creon
So I can say how helpful you have been.

Teiresias
But now you are balanced on a razor's edge.

Creon
What is it? How I shudder at your words!

Teiresias
You'll know, when you hear the signs that I have marked.
I sat where every bird of heaven comes in my old place of augury, and heard bird-cries I'd never known. They screeched about goaded by madness, inarticulate.
I marked that they were tearing one another with claws of murder. I could hear the wing-beats.
I was afraid, so straight away I tried burnt sacrifice upon the flaming altar.

No fire caught my offerings. Slimy ooze dripped on the ashes, smoked and sputtered there.
Gall burst its bladder, vanished into vapor;
the fat dripped from the bones and would not burn.
These are the omens of the rites that failed, as my boy here has told me. He's my guide as I am guide to others.
Why has this sickness struck against the state?
Through your decision.
All of the altars of the town are choked with leavings of the dogs and birds; their feast was on that fated, fallen Polynoeices.
So the gods will have no offering from us, not prayer, nor flame of sacrifice. The birds will not cry out a sound I can distinguish, gorged with the greasy blood of that dead man.
Think of these things, my son. All men may err but error once committed, he's no fool nor yet unfortunate, who gives up his stiffness and cures the trouble he has fallen in.
Stubbornness and stupidity are twins.
Yield to the dead. Why goad him where he lies?
What use to kill the dead a second time?
I speak for your own good. And I am right. Learning from a wise counselor is not pain if what he speaks are profitable words.

Creon
Old man, you all, like bowmen at a mark, have bent your bows at me. I've had my share of seers. I've been an item in your accounts. Make profit, trade in Lydian silver-gold, pure gold of India; that's your chief desire. But you will never cover up that corpse. Not if the very eagles tear their food from him, and leave it at the throne of Zeus. I wouldn't give him up for burial in fear of that pollution. For I know no mortal being can pollute the gods. O old Teiresias, human beings fall; the clever ones the furthest, when they plead a shameful case so well in hope of profit.

Teiresias
Alas! What man can tell me, has he thought at all . . .

Creon
What hackneyed saw is coming from your lips?

Teiresias
How better than all wealth is sound good counsel.

Creon
And so is folly worse than anything.

Teiresias
And you're infected with that same disease.

Creon
I'm reluctant to be uncivil to a seer . . .

Teiresias
You're that already. You have said I lie.
Antigone

1 Creon
   Well, the whole crew of seers are money-mad.

5 Teiresias
   And the whole tribe of tyrants grab at gain.

10 Creon
   Do you realize you are talking to a king?

15 Teiresias
   I know. Who helped you save this town you hold?

Creon
   You’re a wise seer, but you love wickedness.

20 Teiresias
   You’ll bring me to speak the unspeakable, very soon.

Creon
   Well, speak it out. But do not speak for profit.

25 Teiresias
   No, there’s no profit in my words for you.

Creon
   You’d better realise that you can’t deliver my mind, if you should sell it, to the buyer.

30 Teiresias
   Know well, the sun will not have rolled its course many more days, before you come to give corpse for these corpses, child of your own loins.
   For you’ve confused the upper and lower worlds.
   You sent a life to settle in a tomb;
   you keep up here that which belongs below
   the corpse unburied, robbed of its release.
   Not you, nor any god that rules on high can claim him now.
   You rob the nether gods of what is theirs.
   So the pursuing horrors lie in wait to track you down. The Furies sent by Hades and by all gods will even you with your victims.
Now say that I am bribed! At no far time shall men and women wail within your house.
And all the cities that you fought in war whose sons had burial from wild beasts, or dogs, or birds that brought the stench of your great wrong back to each hearth, they move against you now.
A Bowman, as you said, I send my shafts,
now you have moved me, straight. You'll feel the wound.
Boy, take me home now. Let him spend his rage on younger men, and learn to calm his tongue, and keep a better mind than now he does.

(Exit.)

Chorus
Lord, he has gone. Terrible prophecies!
And since the time when I first grew grey hair his sayings to the city have been true.

Creon
I also know this. And my mind is torn.
To yield is dreadful. But to stand against him.
Dreadful to strike my spirit to destruction.

Chorus
Now you must come to counsel, and take advice.

Creon
What must I do? Speak, and I shall obey.

Chorus
Go free the maiden from that rocky house.
Bury the dead who lies in readiness.

Creon
This is your counsel? You would have me yield?

Chorus
Quick as you can. The gods move very fast when they bring ruin on misguided men.
Creon
How hard, abandonment of my desire.
But I can fight necessity no more.

Chorus
Do it yourself. Leave it to no one else.

Creon
I'll go at once. Come, followers, to your work.
You that are here round up the other fellows.
Take axes with you, hurry to that place that overlooks us.
Now my decision has been overturned shall I, who bound her, set her free myself.
I've come to fear it's best to hold the laws of old tradition to the end of life.

(Exit.)

Chorus
God of the many names, Semele's golden child, child of Olympian thunder, Italy's lord.
Lord of Eleusis, where all men come to mother Demeter's plain.
Bacchus, who dwell in Thebes,
by Ismenus' running water,
where wild Bacchic women are at home,
on the soil of the dragon seed.
Seen in the glaring flame, high on the double mount,
with the nymphs of Parnassus at play on the hill, seen by Kastalia's flowing stream.
You come from the ivied heights, from green Euboea's shore.
In immortal words we cry your name, lord, who watch the ways,
the many ways of Thebes.

This is your city, honored beyond the rest,
the town of your mother's miracle-death.
Now, as we wrestle our grim disease, come with healing step from Parnassus' slope or over the moaning sea.
Leader in dance of the fire-pulsing stars, overseer of the voices of night,
child of Zeus, be manifest, with due companionship of Maenad maids whose cry is but your name.

Messenger

Neighbors of Cadmus, and Amphion's house, there is no kind of state in human life which I now dare to envy or to blame.
Luck sets it straight, and luck she overturns
the happy or unhappy day by day.
No prophecy can deal with men's affairs.
Creon was envied once, as I believe,
for having saved this city from its foes and having got full power in this land.
He steered it well. And he had noble sons.
Now everything is gone.
Yes, when a man has lost all happiness,
he's not alive. Call him a breathing corpse.
Be very rich at home. Live as a king.
But once your joy has gone, though these are left they are smoke's shadow to lost happiness.

Chorus

What is the grief of princes that you bring?

Messenger

They're dead. The living are responsible.

Chorus

Who died? Who did the murder? Tell us now.

Messenger

Haemon is gone. One of his kin drew blood.

Chorus

But whose arm struck? His father's or his own?

Messenger

He killed himself. His blood is on his father.
Chorus
Seer, all too true the prophecy you told!

Messenger
This is the state of things. Now make your plans.

(Enter, from the palace, Eurydice.)

Chorus
Eurydice is with us now, I see.
Creon's poor wife. She may have come by chance.
She may have heard something about her son.

Eurydice
I heard your talk as I was coming out to greet the goddess Pallas with my prayer.
And as I moved the bolts that held the door
I heard of my own sorrow.
I fell back fainting in my women's arms.
But say again just what the news you bring.
I, whom you speak to, have known grief before.

Messenger
Dear lady, I was there, and I shall tell, leaving out nothing of the true account.
Why should I make it soft for you with tales to prove myself a liar? Truth is right.
I followed your husband to the plain's far edge, where Polyneices' corpse was lying still unpitted. The dogs had torn him all apart.
We prayed the goddess of all journeyings, and Pluto, that they turn their wrath to kindness,
we gave the final purifying bath,
then burned the poor remains on new-cut boughs,
and heaped a high mound of his native earth.
Then turned we to the maiden's rocky bed, death's hollow marriage-chamber.
But, still far off, one of us heard a voice in keen lament by that unblest abode.
He ran and told the master. As Creon came he heard confusion crying. He groaned and spoke:
"Am I a prophet now, and do I tread
the saddest of all roads I ever trod?
My son’s voice crying! Servants, run up close, stand by the tomb and look, push through the crevice where we built the pile of rock, right to the entry.
Find out if that is Haemon’s voice I hear or if the gods are tricking me indeed.”
We obeyed the order of our mournful master.
In the far corner of the tomb we saw her, hanging by the neck, caught in a noose of her own linen veiling.
Haemon embraced her as she hung, and mourned his bride’s destruction, dead and gone below, his father’s actions, the unfated marriage.
When Creon saw him, he groaned terribly, and went toward him, and called him with lament:
“What have you done, what plan have you caught up,
what sort of suffering is killing you?
Come out, my child, I do beseech you, come!”
The boy looked at him with his angry eyes, spat in his face and spoke no further word.
He drew his sword, but as his father ran,
he missed his aim. Then the unhappy boy,
in anger at himself, leant on the blade.
It entered, half its length, into his side.
While he was conscious he embraced the maiden, holding her gently. Last, he gasped out blood, red blood on her white cheek.
Corpse on a corpse he lies. He found his marriage.
Its celebration in the halls of Hades.
So he has made it very clear to men that to reject good counsel is a crime.

(Eurydice returns to the house.)

Chorus
What do you make of this? The queen has gone in silence. We know nothing of her mind.

Messenger
I wonder at her, too. But we can hope that she has gone to mourn her son within with her own women, not before the town.
She knows discretion. She will do no wrong.
Chorus
I am not sure. This muteness may portend as great disaster as a loud lament.

Messenger
I will go in and see if some deep plan hides in her heart's wild pain. You may be right.
There can be heavy danger in mute grief.

(The messenger goes into the house. Creon enters with his followers. They are carrying Haemon's body on a bier.)

Chorus
But look, the king draws near.
His own hand brings the witness of his crime,
the doom he brought on himself.

Creon
O crimes of my wicked heart, harshness bringing death.
You see the killer, you see the kin he killed.
My planning was all unblest.
Son, you have died too soon.
Oh, you have gone away through my fault, not your own.

Chorus
You have learned justice, though it comes too late.

Creon
Yes, I have learned in sorrow. It was a god who struck, who has weighted my head with disaster;
he drove me to wild strangeways,
his heavy heel on my joy.
Oh sorrows, sorrows of men.

(Re-enter the messenger from a side door of the palace)

Messenger
Master, you hold one sorrow in your hands but you have more, stored up inside the house.
Creon
What further suffering can come on me?

Messenger
Your wife has died. The dead man’s mother in deed, poor soul, her wounds are fresh.

Creon
Hades, harbor of all,
you have destroyed me now.
Terrible news to hear, horror the tale you tell.
I was dead, and you kill me again.
Boy, did I hear you right?
Did you say the queen was dead, slaughter on slaughter heaped?

(The central doors of the palace begin to open.)

Chorus
Now you can see. Concealment is all over.

(The doors are open, and the corpse of Eurydice is revealed.)

Creon
My second sorrow is here. Surely no fate remains which can strike me again. Just now, I held my son in my arms.
And now I see her dead.
Woe for the mother and son.

Messenger
There, by the altar, dying on the sword, her eyes fell shut. She wept her older son who died before, and this one. Last of all she cursed you as the killer of her children.

Creon
I am mad with fear. Will no one strike and kill me with cutting sword?
Sorrowful, soaked in sorrow to the bone!

Messenger
Yes, for she held you guilty in the death of him before you, and the elder dead.
Creon

How did she die?

Messenger

Struck home at her own heart when she had heard of Haemon's suffering.

Creon

This is my guilt, all mine. I killed you, I say it clear.
Servants, take me away, out of the sight of men.
I who am nothing more than nothing now.

Chorus

Your plan is good—if any good is left.
Best to cut short our sorrow.

Creon

Let me go, let me go. May death come quick, bringing my final day.
O let me never see tomorrow's dawn.

Chorus

That is the future's. We must look to now.
What will be is in other hands than ours.

Creon

All my desire was in that prayer of mine.

Chorus

Pray not again. No mortal can escape the doom prepared for him.

Creon

Take me away at once, the frantic man who killed my son, against my meaning. I cannot rest.
My life is warped past cure. My fate has struck me down.

(Creon and his attendants enter the house.)
Chorus

Our happiness depends on wisdom all the way.
The gods must have their due.

Great words by men of pride bring greater blows upon them.
So wisdom comes to the old.
